A Dual Life

One of the first things a baby identifies is who his parents are. As parents, we teach our children to recognize themselves by association. Jesus, born into the flesh, was taught the same. His parents, grandparents, aunts, uncles, and neighbors would have all instructed him to label his identity as the son of Joseph and Mary. It is natural and it is normal to teach children to identify with their life here on earth. It would be strange if your parents raised you without teaching you that you were their child. I want to make the point that Jesus was a typical boy in the most general sense of the word.

When Jesus was a child, he went to school and studied the Torah just like the other children. However, the distinction that set him apart from the other twelve-year-old boys was that as he studied the scriptures, he saw himself in the scriptures and began to recognize what was written about him. Thus, the awareness of two sides to life was launched; the spirit life and the natural life.

In Luke chapter two, verse 49 says that when Mary and Joseph, Jesus' mother and father, found him in the temple with the teachers of the law, Jesus had quite a profound statement to make. Jesus had been missing from his parents for three days. When Joseph and Mary discovered his location, Jesus calmly told Joseph that he was in his Father's house, doing his Father's business. He was obviously not talking about his father, Joseph, because if he had been, Joseph would have known exactly where to find Jesus and his purpose for being in the temple. Jesus, at the age of twelve, knew more about his identity than most adults will ever know. He could define the truth of the spirit realm, the higher life, while simultaneously acknowledging the reality of His flesh, the lower life. Jesus was born to flesh, his parents Mary and Joseph. But who he really was, and who you really are, is a spirit being that has a heavenly Father. If you have experienced the second birth, you are a child of God.

Jesus was the son of Joseph, a carpenter from Nazareth.

It was a life wrapped in flesh, allowing him to exist in the earth and carry out the plan of God. Jesus was also the son of God. This was a life in the place called spirit occurring parallel to the visible life that everyone around Jesus could see with their natural eyes. There is no time lapse between the natural and the spirit realm; as there is neither a distance from wherever you are to the place of the spirit. Jesus demonstrated from a young age that there is to be a simultaneous operation from both lives. It is a fact that you walk in the flesh and it requires no thought or effort to walk in the flesh.

But in order to walk in the spirit, a higher way of living, you must begin to understand the spirit. To understand the spirit and communication therein, you have no choice but to pursue the knowledge of whom you are in God.

Let me take this one step further and say that if you don't know who you are in God, you will not know how to communicate with him in the spirit. No proper communication will transpire unless you are standing in the place of who you really are. That place is as a son or daughter of God. If you don't learn what it means to be a son or daughter of God, you won't pray or have communion with God as he intends. To communicate with people, you must know how to speak their language or use body language to deliver your message. In the same way, God is a spirit, and you must learn to communicate in the spirit to develop that life with him.

Because Jesus walked in the spirit realm, he knew where to get answers. In his natural life, he did things the way in which the laws of this world mandated. Jesus paid his taxes just like everyone else. In fact, he paid his disciples' taxes in addition to his own. Jesus did not have a nine-to-five job, so where would he get the money? As a result of Jesus walking in the spirit, he knew where to find the money to pay his taxes. No one living only in the natural world, the lower life, would have known to look inside a fish's mouth for a coin. Jesus continually lived and walked on two different levels at the same time. In spite of living this dual life, he was confident of and secure in his singular identity as the Son of God.

Jesus was never, ever defeated because he saw himself as a son of God. Do you know who is aware that you need a miracle to survive whatever you are dealing with in life? God is. And he is waiting for you to recognize who you are and utilize the power he gave you as his son or daughter. There is nothing you could ever do that would make the Father quit loving you or make you quit being a son or daughter. When you were born into the family of God, you were given every right, every blessing, and every inheritance the Father has to give. You have been given the same empowerment Jesus had when he walked the earth.

You can live with the same power and confidence that Jesus did. You have been given the power to be a son of God. If you are born again, you have received the spirit of sonship. Jesus was sent to the earth in order to make you a son of God. Before you were saved, you were merely the son of whomever you were born to and you were reduced to accepting whatever was handed to you in life. But when you become a child of God, you are given other options. You can live higher. It is your choice to either limit yourself to the inheritance of your natural parents or open yourself up to the limitless blessings of being a son or daughter of the Living God. Intentionally walk as a child of God, demanding your sonship to be the prevalent identification of who you are.

By the end of this year Lucy will have been involved in 4 overseas trips. Truly the glory is here as meetings have been full and the people so hungry for God's presence. In France, she ministered in February at the annual prayer conference in Menton. The church there has seen tremendous growth as the people are so desperate for the Word and receptive to the teachers and prophets that God sends their way. She also was back in Nice France this fall ministering along side Billye Brim and David Horton to pastors from across Europe. The meetings were standing room only.

This summer a door of opportunity opened for Lucy to minister on Guadeloupe Island in the Caribbean. Here Lucy experienced teaching in an open-air stadium for the first time. Several thousands were willing to endure the humidity and pull from the anointing as Lucy taught and Pastor Marie Helene Moulin translated and also ministered herself. As the prophecies have declared the islands and coastlands are seeing a great move of God.

In September, Lucy ventured to a youth prayer conference in Tennessee. For three power packed days, she taught and imparted life-changing truths to a hungry group of teens. The praise band, All Out, set the table with anointed music as the altars were filled each service with impassioned worship. Lucy challenged all to grow in their role as sons of God and live as citizens of heaven in their daily lives. These young lives will never be the same as they received deposits straight from the presence of God.

The final trip of the year will be to the land of Israel. This nation has seen many prophetic changes in 2006 and we know that it will continue to be the centerpiece of world attention from now on. Lucy will be working with Billye Brim and other ministers as they travel the land praying and participating in strategic divine appointments as the Spirit of God leads.

I would love to have you as a partner with Lucy McKee Ministries. The vision God has given me is large and through the prayer and financial support of my partners the work is being accomplished. Thank you for prayerfully considering helping me to go forth and raise up an army of end time pray-ers.

To the thirsty; I will give water without price from the fountain of the water of Life
